PEACE MEETINGS HELD IN ZION

Much Interest Displayed in Consideration of the Topic.

WELL-KNOWN SPEAKERS DELIVER ADDRESSES

Meetings Made Further Attractive by Musical Features of Merit.

A series of peace meetings, which were addressed by well-known local speakers, were held at various places Sunday night, inder the direction of the National Counil of Women and the National Woman's Soffrage association. These meetings were accordance with instructions from Lucia Ames Mead, chairman of the peace and arbitration department of these organizations. The meetings, as a rule, were well attended and much interest was displayed in the consideration of uniersal peace as a substitute for war. In addition to the addresses, the meetings were made further attractive by musical features of merit that were appropriate to the occasion and were thoroughly en-loyed.

Demonstrate Advantage of Peace.

The originators of the meetings not only submitted resolutions in keeping with the subject under consideration, which were unanimously adopted at all the meetings, but topics for demonstrating the advan tages of peace were submitted as follows: tages of peace were submitted as follows:
The pecuniary cost of war, the moral results of war, the effect of war upon the national ideal of American citizenship, the story of the organization of the court of arbitration; a statement of cases that have already been brought before it, consideration of differences existing among peoples at the present time which properly should be referred to the court of arbitration; the incompatibility of the Christian life with war, its practices and its ideals.

The resolutions were the same as those adopted by an assemblage of American women May 15, 1902, and are as follows:

What Resolutions Set Forth.

What Resolutions Set Forth.

Resolved. That American wemen assembled on May 15, 1902, for the purpose of considering the fruits of peace, do selemnly pledge inemselves to meet annually to hold a demonstration in behalf of peace and arbitration. They commit themselves to the adoption, as their own, of that ideal of loving brotherhood which can be realized only by the cessation of international hostilities. They rejudiate war as a means of settling international difficulties as they repudiate the duel as a means of settling personal animosities. They accept as a corollary of the universal atherhood of God, the universal brotherhood of man. They extend a greeting to the women of other countries and ask all women everywhere to adopt as their own the task assumed by the international Council of Women, which is the application of the golden rule to society, custom and law.

IN ELEVENTH WARD.

Mrs. McMasters Presides; Judge King Delivered Address. In the Eleventh ward the meeting was held as in other places, under the joint auspices of the Women's Relief society auspices of the Women's Relief society and the Young Ladies Mutual Improvement association of the Mormon church, it was presided over by Mrs. Sarah McMasters of the former organization, and with her on the rostrum sat Miss Maud May Babcock of the Y. L. M. I. A. The address was delivered by Judge William H. King and music was furnished by the ward choir, under the leadership of Horace S. Ensign, who also sang in an impressive way as a solo, "The Flag Without a Stain." The numbers sang by the choir were: "The Star-Spangled Banner." Behold, a Royal Army" and "Scatter Sunshine."

"Behold, a Royal Army" and "Scatter Sunshine."

The resolutions, like those submitted at all the meetings, were adopted, on the motion of Miss Maud May Babcock, who hoped that in addition to their adoption those present would "accept and carry them out in their lives."

The invocation was offered by Bishop Robert Morris, and the audience was dismissed by John M. Knight.

Judge King's Address.

Judge King's Address,

Judge King's address was decidedly impressive from its very earnestness and the logical way in which he showed the advantages of peace over war as applied to both individuals and to governments. He began by stating that it was a remarkable fact that women had been the foremost leaders and advocates of peace and of universal brotherhood in all places and at all times. They had, he said, been compelled to bear the heaviest burdens of their sacrifices, sorrows and bereavements in times of war, when men were elated over the success of victories. Their natures, he said, were more responsive to finer sensibilities than were the natures of men, and they were more susceptible to the claims of righteousness and justice.

War Not Conducive to Progress. War Not Conducive to Progress.

War Not Conducive to Progress.

He claimed that the theory that war was conducive to progress was wrong; that in order for nations to grow and become strong it was not necessary for the road to a civilized progress to be machadamized with bones and to be cemented with blood. The innate love of war on the part of humanity, he claimed, was inherited from the barbarous spirit that had ruled the world for thousands of years, and that the spirit of savagery had not yet been brought under complete subjection.

Justice Takes Place of Bludgeon.

Law and justice he said, was slowly taking the place of the bludgeon, the weapon of savagery, and that the time in which the sword and the battlefield were the final arbiters was happily passing away. The growth of morals however, had been slow and it had taken time for people to realize that might could not permanently take the place of right. It was but gradually that the underlying principles of justice had been discovered.

Work of the Nazarene.

Work of the Nazarene.

He paid a tribute to the Nazarene, who, he said, had done more to promote civilization and to uplift humanity than all other teachers combined. He had discouraged the mad strugele of ambition and had replaced it with a desire for justice. He had found women as slaves and vassals and men without the rights of chattels. He had found a false philosophy and false ideas of the relations of humanity, but that he had freed the slaves and lifted women to the proud position of queen of the home and made her the equal and honorable consort of her husband. The world, he said, was too much inclined to cheer the soldier and to neglect the advocate of peace.

Should Teach Peace,

Should Teach Peace.

He regretted, he said, that our school books inculcated in the minds of the youth the grandeur of battle, and educated them to read of carnage with avidity. We should teach peace, he said, in the schools, for war was wrong—it originated in heil. When we say war is necessary, he said, we do not know God or understand the underlying principles of humanity.

Advocated Arbitration.

cated the Hague peace conference, should invite war and then be subjected to the invite war and then be subjected to the humiliation of defeat.

He believed that the crusade for universal peace must be continued and that hatlonal differences would eventually be settled as are personal differences, without bloodshed, and that the change would come just as the inhuman system of duesing had been abolished and superceded by ing had been abolished and superceded by settlements in the courts.

IN TWELFTH WARD.

W. W. Riter, High Counselor of the Stake, the Orator.

Peace services were held at the Twelfth ward meeting-house beginning at 7.39 o'clock. The address of the evening was delivered by William W. Riter, high counselor of the stake and president of the Board of Regents of the University of Utah. He took for his text the fourth verse of the second chapter of Isalah: And he shall judge among the nations of the earth and rebuke many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning hooks, and nation shall not lift up sword against nation.

The speaker drew attention to the progress which is being made toward the peace of the world, and said that all the wars which had ever been waged were only part of the programme which the Lord had laid out toward the final establishment of the universal brotherhood of man. All great generals, he said, had been simply instruments in the hands of God for the furtherance of his great plan. He eloquently depicted the horrors of war and said that bloodshed had been necessary to quicken the consciences of men and turn their desires toward the idea of universal mercy and justice, which will some day prevail throughout the world.

Denounced Bonaparte,

Denounced Bonaparte.

Denounced Bonaparte.

He referred to Napoleon Bonaparte as the most contemptible character in all history, but declared that he had been one of God's instruments in shaping conditions toward the one great end—as much of an instrument as had been the universally loved Lincoln, who directed the shedding of rivers of blood, for the sake of mankind. He pointed to the Czar of Russia as the most splendid specimen of moral and upright manhood on any throne in Europe today, and excused his tardiness in offering anything like substantial peace and liberty to his people by asserting his inability to obtain obedience to his wishes. He blamed the aristocracy of Russia, and not the Czar, for existing conditions throughout the Empire.

Due to Providence.

The speaker declared that everything hat has ever taken place in the history of mankind had been by the direction of Providence, and that he was one of those who believe that every event in the his-tory of the world had been for man's ul-timate benefit.

At the conclusion of the address Mrs. Amelia W. Wardrop offered the resolu-tion cited above, which was unanimously adopted.

COL. YOUNG IS HEARD.

"To Mould Public Opinion," His Answer to Vital Query.

Answer to Vital Query.

In the Pioneer stake, the meeting was held in the Pioneer Stake hall, and the speaker was greeted by a full house. Miss Sadie Heath, president of the Young Women's Mutual improvement association, introduced Gov. John C. Cutler, who took charge of the meeting.

Gov. Cutler spoke on the subject of peace for a few minutes, dwelling on the tendency toward peace that has existed since the beginning of civilization, and tracing the advance toward that goal made by all civilizations and nations in all parts of the world.

Col. Young Introduced.

Col. Young Introduced.

Gov. Cutler then introduced Col. Willard Young the principal speaker of the evening. Col. Young spoke on the subject of the "Formation of the Court of Arbitration." The speaker gave a brief outline of the work of The Hague peace conference, starting with the first overtures made by the Czar of Russia to the Governments of all the civilized powers, and including the work of the conference and the questions acted upon by that body.

To Mould Public Opinion.

After giving the story in a very interesting manner and making the work of the Peace conference plain to any who had not been convergent with the subject, Col. Young spoke at length on the phase of the question, which he stated had first appealed to him when he was invited to speak at the meeting, that being 'What can we do?' The answer, Col. Young said, is: 'To mould public opinion.'

Chorus by Children.

At the conclusion of the address a se-lection was rendered by a children's chorus of the Pioneer stake, and this was followed by the reading of Kipling's "Re-cessionsh" by Elder I. E. Willey. At the conclusion of the programme the audience joined in singing "America." and was dis-missed with the benediction.

EIGHTEENTH WARD MEETING.

Stephen L Richards Delivers Interesting Address on Peace Subject. After the regular meeting at the Eighteenth ward chapel last night was held what was termed a "Peace" meeting. Sunday being the anniversary of the Peace conference held at The Hague, the ladles of the Eighteenth ward took the meeting in hand, under the auspices of the Ladies' Relief society and the Young Ladles' society, both of which are auxiliaries of the National Council of Women.

Mrs. F. S. Richards of the Relief society presided at the meeting, and Rulon S. Wells offered prayer. The choir sang Kipling's "Recessional," and the Eighteenth ward quartette gave "The Flag Without a Stain."

The speaker of the evening was Stephen L. Richards. Mr. Richards stated the purpose of the peace meeting—that it was to discourage war and punishment, such as the "water cure." the trial by fire, and the trial of battle as practiced by the unclents, and then brought the subject up to the present time, making mention of the great sums which are being expended yearly by all nations for battleships.

Reads From Ingersoll.

Reads From Ingersoll.

Mr. Richards read from Robert G. Ingersoll's lecture entitled, "Man, Woman and Child," that portion in which are devoted several paragraphs to Napoleon and the poor man of France. Ambition and power shattered forever on the one hand and the simple, peaceful life of the poor man on the other.

Spirit of Home Invoked.

The speaker concluded by saying: 'Let the spirit of home and peace prevail. Let the children be taught in the ways of peace but with an admiration for those great and good men who have given their lives in defense of their country. And let the women of the land do everything in their power to bring about this great

IN THIRTEENTH WARD.

Three Speakers Delivered Brief Addresses Here.

The programme for the peace meeting in the Thirteenth ward meeting-house was in charge of Mrs. C. J. Thomas. A quartette rendered several musical selections and Miss Edith Grant sang a solo. The speakers were Rev. Frank Fay Eddy, Levi E. Young and Joseph E. Taylor. The meeting was largely attended and at the close of the exercises the resolution which was presented at all the meetings was adopted.

'FRISCO TO CALL FOR MUCH STEEL

Rebuilding of Stricken City Will Strongly Stimulate the World's Iron Trade.

LONDON, May 27.-Reports indicate that the rebuilding of San Francisco will have a very material influence on the iron trade. Just now the people of this country feel the effect in one of the most interesting industrial problems.

After the burning of Baltimore there was some very adverse criticism of steel frame building, based on a too cursory survey of the ruins of that city. But since the shaking and burning of San Francisco all the testimony has been in favor of the steel framing, which of late years has replaced the wood and adobe buildings formerly almost universal in Boost for Steel.

The manner in which the steel framing has come through both earthquake and fire may or may not justify all that is fire may or may not justify all that is claimed for it in lands which are subject to earth-shakings, but it certainly ensures that steel will be the material of which the new San Francisco will mainly be constructed.

Already the market has begun to palpitute in anticipation of the coming great call for steel. The market for pig from warrants is no longer, as it used to be, the barometer of trade, but it remains the index of the iron trade.

What really caused the short sellers of

Will Be Big Demand.

What really caused the short sellers of iron warrants to close their accounts in a hurry, and induced others to buy, is the prospect of an enormous demand for iron and steel for San Francisco. The shipment of pig iron to San Francisco from British ports is a matter of regular practice year by year, for England can deliver pig iron by water in California at a lower freight cost than smelters in the Eastern or Southern States can deliver by rail. Californian orders for British pig iron will not be the creation of the San Francisco disaster, but it is noteworthy that cable messages have already been received pressing for prompt shipment of parcels bought for that market long before the earthquake.

Question of Competition.

Question of Competition.

Question of Competition.

It is believed that San Francisco will want more pig fron than usual this year, but that what she will chiefly want, and in the speedlest possible manner, is structural steel. Now, one question is, can the American steel manufacturers meet all the prospective demands, which will be urgent, from San Francisco, in addition to the business they have already undertaken? And another question is, can they deliver structural steel as cheaply in San Francisco as England can?

Increased Manufacture.

Increased Manufacture.

There can be little doubt among those who have studied the question that the use, and consequently the manufacture of basic steel will have to be greatly increased in this country. All the deposits of hematite from one within available reach of a suitable seaboard are already being mined for all they are worth. Some new seams have recently been discovered in Cumberland, but the addition they can make to our supply is comparatively insignificant.

If we cannot get more hematite ore, we insignificant.

If we cannot get more hematite ore, we must find other material from which to make steel, because undoubtedly the demand for steel has increased and is increasing. That material we can find in our ordinary iron, if we are willing to use basic, instead of Bessemer steel. And the large amount of material that will be required for the rebuilding of San Francisco will probably give a great impetus to the use of basic steel all over the world. However that may be, the destruction of the great California city promises to be the making of a record year in the steel industry of the world.

Old Rules Abrogated.

The rules existing before the catastrophe of April 18, under which a board company was allowed permission in certain cases to meet the cut rate made by a non-board company, have been arbrogated and no board company will, until further notice, be permitted to vary from the rates to be fixed by the board of underwriters.

the rates to be fixed by the board of underwriters.

The matter of fixing increased and special rates for San Francisco has been discussed by the board of underwriters, but thus far no schedule has been adopted. The insurance men say that the crippled condition of the San Francisco fire department and the impairment of the water plant there makes the hazard against fire greater and justifies them in raising the rates on new policies. rates on new policies

After the offertory the congregation joined in singing "The Star-Spangied Banner."

Rev. Davis took his text from Matthew xxvii/42, "He saved others, himself he cannot save." Mr. Davis spoke in part as follows:

Rev. Davis's Address.

Rev. Davis's Address.

Rev. Davis's Address.

I am glad that we Americans have today something to remember, such a rich treasure of history to call our own, a splendid inheritance to hand down to our posterity. No other people has ever, within so short a period of national existence as we can boast, added so many bright pages to the record of human progress. We take a justifiable pride in the short, but brilliant career of the Union, with its devotion to liberty, and its long honor roll of great and good men. We feel that measured by what has been achieved, by the stature of her leaders, America is not a young, but an old nation. I am glad that the memories of America are those which will inspire the youth of the land, deeds, brave deeds, done for the sake of great principles, and for the good of all men.

As to Memorial Day.

As to Memorial Day.

As to Memorial Day.

It is well that we have that institution which we call Memorial day, inagurated out of respect for those who fell in the Civil war, that their remembrance might be kept alive in the hearts of the nation. As Abraham Lincoln said at Gettiysburg. 'It is altogether fitting and proper,' that we should romember our solder dead. The day has been especially said to mind the past. In this sense it is a holy day, for those who have fallen have consecrated our land to God, not with prayers alone, but with their blood. The day becomes to us more than a memorial—it becomes a sacred influence to mold the future.

Great Body of Patriotic Men.

Great Body of Patriotic Men.

Not all of the soldiers and leaders of the Union were animated solely by patriotism, nor did all ulinderstand the nature and importance of the issue at stake. Love of excitement led some into the army; politics, and very bad politics at that, were intruded into the conduct of the war at times, but the vant majority of the soldiers were devoted, heart and soul, to the single aim of saving the Union. For this reason they will always be remembered with something of the reverence whave for Tyndale and Wyclife, the martyrs who died to give us our English Hible. The soldiers could not save themselves, they died to save others, to save the ark of the constitution delivered to them by their fathers, and by so doing they have made themselves immortal:

This Land the Battlefield.

This Land the Battlefield.

From of old God had destined our land to be the battlefield where the question of hu-man brotherhood should be settled for all time. That idea, under God's providence, be-comes the central thought of the Declaration of Independence, and of the Constitution. Slav-ery could not long exist in a land where the Declaration of Independence had been signed, where a Lexington had been fought, where a where a Lexington had been fought, where a where a Lexington had been fought, where a Warron had died. The specter of slavery haunted the men who guided the ship of state and filled them with forebodings of a wreck. God raised up men to feariessly point out the iniquity of the nation. The struggle for freedom was waged by men who crossed the prairies, as of old their fathers crossed the seas to make the new territories free state settlements.

John Brown's Work.

John Brown's Work.

The crisis came at last. We can never forget the debt we owe to one man, God's prophet of deliverance, the forerunner, who promet the work of the manipation, Ahraham Lincoln When other men wrung their hands and said, "What shall we do?" John Brown marched forth against the corrupt and giant institution of slavery, with his little hand of followers, and fired another shot heard round the world. When no man dared to say, "Liberty" above his breath, John Brown stood forth and dared to be a man, dared to denounce the "divine institution" of slavery as a damnable sin, dared to proclaim that "resistance to tyrants is obedieses to God."

Should Not Forget Others.

We never tire of rehearsing the deeds of valor done by our soldiers, but we should not forget the others, the equally brave hearts who stayed at home. We will remember the wives mothers and sweathearts who remained behind during those dreadful days of suspense. It took courage to wait on through those dark days. Yes, we honor the soldiers, but they are not all, and all of the blood of the war was not shed on the battlefield. Some came, we will never know how much, from the bleeding, broken hearts at home.

Realize Over Pariger Union.

Rejoice Over Perfect Union.

Rejoice Over Perfect Union.

Soldiers, we rejoice that we have today a more perfect Union than we ever had before. We rejoice that because the blood of brave men pass, with the pricoless stain expressed from human hearts, dyed that bright flag until its stripes were blended in one solid field of costly crimson, the glorious banner of the Republic, with not one star lost, and not one stripe erased, now floats in ample folds, on land and sea, in every breeze from the lakes to the Rio Grande, from Maine's rock-bound coast to the Golden Gate, over the loval States of a free and undivided Union.

As soldiers of the Lord Jesus Christ, I call upon you to rally to the standard of right-counses. Teach your children, the children of America, something more than patriotism, teach them devotion to the highest good of the nation.

That the several American medicinal roots, the concentrated glyceric extracts of which make up Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, have the strongest kind of endorsement by scores of lead-ing medical writers of all the several schools of practice, a brief glance at the standard works on Materia Medica will show. Of Golden Seal root, which is one of the prominent ingredients of "Golden Medical Discovery," Dr. Roberts Bartholow, of Jefferson Medical College, says: "Very useful as a stom-achie (stomach) tonic and in atonic Cures gastric (stomach) dyspepsia. catarrh and headaches accompanying sume." He also mentions catarrh of the gall duct, jaundice and constipaas diseases which the use of Seal root overcomes; catarrh of the intestines, even when it has proceeded to ulceration, is remarkably benefited by Hydrastis (Golden Seal root).

Dr. Grover Coe, of New York, says: "Hydrastis (Golden Seal root) exercises an especial influence over mucous surfaces. Upon the liver it acts with equal certainty and efficacy. As a cholagogue (liver invig-orator) it has few equals." Dr. Coe also advises it for affections of the spleen and other abdominal viscera generally, and for scrofulous and glandular diseases, cutaneous eruptions, in-digestion, debility, chronic diarrhœa, constipation, also in several affections peculiar to women, and in all chronic derangements of the liver; also for chronic inflammation of bladder, for which Dr. Coe says "it is one of the most reliable agents of cure." Prof. Hobart A. Hare, M. D., of the University of Pa., says of Golden Seal root that it is "of service in chronic catarrh of the stomach and bowels, following abuse of alcohol, and as a tonic after malarial fever." He further says, it "has a distinct anti-malarial influence." Also "good in all catarrhal conditions, as uterine catarrh, leucorrhea, etc., and as "a curative agent in Travel.

GENEVA. May 27.—An Austrian en-gineer, Herr Balderauer of Salzbury, has been experimenting with much success in the mountains near Salzburg with a novel balloon railway.

It consists of a large captive balloon attached to a single steel rail, which, in turn, is fixed firmly to the side of a steep mountain, whose precipitous slopes no other form of railway could climb without making a series of serpentine detours and passing through tunnels.

Under Good Control.

The balloon remains balanced in the air about ten yards above the rail to which it is attached by a stout wire cable, and it is moved up and down the side of the mountain at the will of the engineer. For an ascent the balloon itself furnishes the lifting force by means of hydrogen, for the descent a large reservoir attached to the balloon is filled with water at the highest station, and serves as "ballast."

Under the balloon is a circular car, seating ten persons. The wire cable from the balloon passes through the floor of the car to a speed regulator underneath, satin skin cream and research.
